Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster

Prepared by:

United Way of the Wine Country (UWWC)
Humboldt/Del Norte Region

WHAT IS VOAD?

VOAD stands for Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster. It was formed following the April 1992 earthquakes that caused severe damage and disruption in Petrolia, Scotia, Rio Dell, Ferndale, and Fortuna. During the recovery stages of the earthquake, VOAD was formed to coordinate information and resources throughout Humboldt County. VOAD is a non-profit organization. Members of VOAD consist of agencies supplying emergency food, shelter, clothing, communication, transportation, counseling, and volunteer personnel during a disaster. VOADs are active throughout the nation, but this is the first such organized effort for Humboldt County.

For more information about VOAD, contact
UWWC – Humboldt/Del Norte Regional Office at 707.443.8637

Humboldt County is susceptible to floods, earthquakes, fires, and tsunamis. Large corporations, small businesses, service organizations, out-of-area non-profit groups, and individuals respond in the event of a disaster. Large and small donations of money, food, water, equipment, and other items are received and need to be distributed. People who do not usually volunteer come forward to help.

Humboldt County's Office of Emergency Services (OES) coordinates the activities of local, state, and federal agencies and provides information to the public via the media. Their primary contact of volunteer organizations is with the American Red Cross. The OES is not prepared to assign numerous volunteers tasks, accept and distribute truckloads of food and water, or other vital emergency activities. Members of VOAD perform these activities.

VOAD will serve as a coordinating body for these organizations, sharing information, directing resources, and screening/assigning volunteers. Complete and appropriate use of all local and state resources is required to receive federal assistance: once received, federal funds are first spent on phones, computers, damage assessment, etc. for FEMA- not food, clothing, water, shelter. Above all else, VOAD seeks to avoid a 'disaster after the disaster' where limited resources are not used well and lack of coordination results in redundant services for some and gaps in service to others.

Transportation

California Department of Transportation (Cal Trans) assesses damage to highways, bridges, and other transportation structures. Cal Trans works directly with OES who disseminates this information to the public.

Public institutions and agencies such as the College of the Redwoods and Humboldt Transit Authority provide busses for transportation through OES.

Nonprofit organizations such as St. Vincent de Paul and Food for People can provide trucks for transportation if they are not in use.

Private companies also assist with transportation of supplies following a disaster.

Others who can assist are listed below:
